

Vivienne Okafor

Hunter: The Reckoning 5th Edition — Character Sheet

Concept

Vivienne Okafor is an Assistant District Attorney in New York, seven years in, sharp enough that she's stopped being surprised when opposing counsel recognizes her name before she's said it. She built her reputation on being unshakeable — the kind of prosecutor who doesn't blink, doesn't rattle, closes strong. Then she lost a case she should have won.

The defendant walked. Clean acquittal, no technicality, just a jury that believed a story Vivienne knew — knew — wasn't true. She spent months afterward picking the trial apart, convinced she'd missed something in the evidence, in the witness prep, somewhere. What she eventually found wasn't a legal error. It was a pattern of details she'd dismissed as irrelevant at the time — because they made no rational sense — that only made sense once she stopped assuming the defendant was human.

She never got to retry the case. Double jeopardy saw to that. What she got instead was the absolute certainty that something walked out of her courtroom that should never have been found "not guilty" by any court, and that certainty hasn't left her since. She still works the DA's office by day. At night, she's trying to make sure it doesn't happen again — and quietly hunting for a way to finish what the trial couldn't.

Tone: Sharp, controlled, courtroom-composed even in danger. She doesn't lose her cool; she redirects it.

Creed & Drive

- Creed: Inquisitive — counters threats by studying them, finding the pattern, working the angle
- Drive: Atonement — she believes she failed to stop something dangerous once, knowingly or not, and is trying to settle that debt

Ambition & Desire

Ambition: Build an airtight case — evidence a courtroom would never have accepted, but proof enough for herself — against the thing that walked out of her courtroom, and make sure it never happens again to anyone else.

Desire: Get through the next case without letting the system fail someone the way it failed her.

Attributes

Physical	Social	Mental
Strength 1	Charisma 3	Intelligence 4
Dexterity 2	Manipulation 3	Wits 3
Stamina 2	Composure 2	Resolve 2

Best trait: Intelligence — the relentless, detail-obsessed legal mind that missed nothing the second time around.

Skills (Balanced: 3/3/3, 5/2, 7/1)

3 dots: Investigation, Persuasion, Academics (Law) 2 dots: Subterfuge, Insight, Awareness, Streetwise, Politics 1 dot: Occult, Technology, Firearms, Athletics, Etiquette, Empathy, Brawl

Edges & Perk

Edge 1: Global Access — can circumvent digital security to pull records, court filings, financial data, and surveillance footage. Pool: Intelligence + Technology. Perk (Global Access): Letter of the Law — can modify criminal records. Dark irony fully intended for a prosecutor.

Edge 2: Sense the Unnatural — while holding a focus object, Vivienne can detect the presence of nearby supernatural creatures (not their identity or nature).

(Both Edges and the Perk are confirmed against the official H5 list.)

Chronicle Tenets (suggested — confirm with your table)

- Don't let the system's blind spots become an excuse.
 - Every case gets a real answer, even the ones no court will hear.
 - Never let someone else pay for what you missed.

Touchstones

- (Open — worth building out. A mentor in the DA's office who doesn't know why she's changed? A defendant she wrongly helped convict while distracted by the real case? Someone from the original case who's still out there, unaware of what almost happened to them?)

Advantages & Flaws (7 dots Merits / 2 dots Flaws)

Merits (7) — confirmed official options:

- Status ... (Background — respected in the DA's office and legal circles, real institutional standing)
- Contacts .. (Background — judges, detectives, court clerks, people who owe her favors)
- Resources .. (Background — steady prosecutor's salary, some financial cushion)

Flaws (2) — confirmed official options:

- Living on the Edge .. (Background Flaw — she's started taking risks past what's professionally or personally safe, chasing the case she can't let go of)

Notes for Play

- Vivienne's horror is procedural, like Ezekiel's, but institutional in a different direction — she trusted a system that failed once, and now she's building her own outside it.
- Her calm is a professional skill, not an absence of fear — worth playing the cracks in it as small and controlled rather than dramatic.
- Good potential overlap with Ezekiel: both Inquisitive, both distrustful of official records for good reason, both quietly building cases nobody else believes yet.
